That dramas were a family-bonding time in our house and that's how I became a superfan of them. They aren't as popular to watch as other Asian dramas, but they are growing in popularity. If you've exhausted all the Korean Dramas on Netflix or want to venture deeper into the world of Asian dramas ago! There is more yelling, more jealousy, mor time jumping into Thai dramas or just another lakorn lover's opinion, this list is the best all-time Thai dramas are easily accessible from anywhere in the world. Through the accident, Kadesurang finds out that Karakade is calling for help with her life in Ayutthaya 300 years ago. Karakade dies and Kadesurang enters her body and starts to fall in love with the new Karakade whereas they hated her before. While romance is blossoming, the political state of Ayutthaya is going through corruption and betrayal as well. Why I love it: I absolutely love historical romances and Love Destiny does not disappoint. The subtitlers explain the differences between the old Thai and modern Thai dialects. The costumes are beautiful and the setting of Ayutthaya is gorgeous. The drama does a great job of going back and forth between Kadesurang learning about the historical city and her living in the actual place. With so many episodes, the plot does a thorough job of incorporating every single character and the current state of Ayutthaya; the whole drama spans 4-5 years which does drag a little at times during all the political unrest. However, Bella and Pope are exciting to watch as they have wonderful chemistry on screen. Quick facts: 12 episodes | Romance, Comedy, Hidden Identity | Also known as The Kitchen Scholar | Watch on MyAsianTV Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Cha-aem's professor is creating a scriptwriting contest for all the students in her class. In order to win this contest, Cha-aem decides she needs to do some real-life research, so she poses as a maid to write her script. The nephew of her new boss, Tam, is suspicious of this new, beautiful maid and does all he can to root out the "truth." Why I love it: This Thai romantic comedy is one of the best all-time Thai dramas to watch. It has many cute scenes that make you gush with its fun music. The best part of it all is that there's not really a jealous ex on the verge of revenge. You get the character development of Cha-aem as she continues her research, but is involved with real-life events. Check out my favorite OST here: Yaa Mong Ma Dai Mai by Mark and Kim Wanderful-Tip: If this is your first jump into Thai lakorns, Ponyachon Kon Krua is highly recommended as one of the top dramas to start with! Quick facts: 15 episodes | Historical Fiction, Romance, Drama | Watch on Dramacool Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Set in the 1940s, Wanida comes from new money as her father, Dao, is a loan shark collecting money from his borrowers. Major Prajak comes from a noble family line and old money, but the family is going through some financial setbacks. Upon their first meeting, Major Prajak and Wanida get off on the wrong foot but it seems fate has a different plan for them. Dao forces Major Prajak and Wanida get off on the wrong foot but it seems fate has a different plan for them. clear debts that Major Prajek's brother can't pay back. Unbeknownst to Wanida, she believes her father when he arranges this "love" marriage for her. Why I love it: Wanida is on my list of best all-time Thai dramas because it is set in a different time. The costumes in this film do not disappoint with cute a-line dresses, 40s hairstyles, and a Thai twist. The plot, though starts off high-handed, is actually pretty well thought out as the story goes on, and there is significantly less yelling and screaming than the usual Thai lakorns. Character-wise, I do love a strong female lead, and Wanida is strong-willed, independent, and very talented. Major Prajak is oblivious to all the manipulations of his exgirlfriend and mother (which can be a tad annoying), but he turns out okay in the end. Wanida is one of my top 3 go-to Thai lakorns. Quick facts: 11 episodes | Part of 4 Huajai Haeng Koon Kao Series (4 Hearts of the Mountain) | Romance, Drama, Comedy, Action | Watch on Dramacool Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Doctor Thipthara, or Nam (meaning water), is the youngest of quadruplets of the Adisuan family. As she is working in the hospital, a badly injured man, Phuwanet is homeless and out of a job so as he is healing, she offers him a position on their family farm. Phuwanet is actually the crown prince of Parawat and had just escaped an assassination attempt on his life. So he decides to go into hiding by letting Nam believe he is homeless. Why I love it: The 4 Hearts of the Mountain series was the beginning of a new phase of Thai actors and actresses making this one of the best all-time Thai dramas. The family dynamics just hook you in starting with Nam. When you find out she's the only girl out of 4 quadruplets, you know there is going to be some good brother plotting schemes. The plotline follows Phuwanet and Nam as they try to figure out who tried to assassinate him which means there really isn't a jealous love interest - that's a plus! The story truly focuses on the budding romance of the 2 main characters and their problematic circumstances, including the antics of her protective brothers! Check out my favorite OST here: Thara Himalaya by Endorphine Quick facts: 12 episodes | Part of 4 Huajai Haeng Koon Kao Series (4 Hearts of the Mountain) | Romance, Comedy, Family Drama | Watch on Dramacool Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: A classic Romeo and Juliet storyline, Akkanee (Fai-meaning fire) and Ajjima (a.k.a. Jeed) are sworn enemies from their parent's generation. Fai is one of the quadruplets and the one managing the Adisuan family farm while Jeed also has a heart for farming and overseeing her own family farm. Since their farms border each other and they don't really like each other, chaos ensues every time they meet. Why I love it: Duangjai Akkhanee is the 2nd installation of the 4 Hearts of the Mountain series and makes the list of best all-time Thai dramas. If I haven't touted enough in Nam's story above, the family dynamics just get better in this 2nd film. Out of the 4 part series, the story of Fai and Jeed is the most comedic and romantic. I also think the characters make a stunning couple. There are heavy themes such as gambling and plotting murder, which makes this story more than just a rom-com. The only critique I have is a jealous girl with a highpitched voice. Even more, the chemistry between Nadech and Yaya is off the charts! This is a hate-to-love story, one of my favorite story plots when it comes to Thai dramas. Quick facts: 15 episodes | Romance, Drama, Revenge, Slap-Kiss | Also known as Waves of Life | Watch on MyAsianTV Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Sathit is a lawyer whose fiance was killed in a car accident by Jeerawat, a beautiful and famous actress. When Sathit finds out that Jeerawat's wealthy background swept the evidence away, he vows to get revenge on her. But as he starts learning more about who Jeerawat truly is, his heart starts wavering. Why I love it: Mark Prin and Yaya Urassaya have amazing chemistry together on-screen. Their emotions for the film were very well displayed. Even more, this slap-kiss trope was bearable, dare I say touching, to watch as Sathit and Jeerawat's characters develop. The first few episodes are focused on the revenge plot, but there is one critical moment when things start to shift causing viewers to be engaged with the lead's story. The music for the film is also very fitting and beautiful! Quick facts: 14 episodes | Romance, Action, Family, Historical, Forced Fake Marriage | Also known as Beloved Loyal Wife | Watch on MyAsianTV Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Saran is heartbroken after his long-time girlfriend rejects him and marries a wealthier man. Because of his profession as a sheriff, Saran asks to be assigned to a dangerous case in the south. Because his mother doesn't want like seeing him heartbroken, she makes good on the verbal promise her husband made to a friend to have their children get married. Although Rin isn't the biological daughter, she accepts to marry Saran to repay the kindness of her adoptive parents. Why I love it: This is a slow-burn love-it's not love at first sight and the contract marriage doesn't have anything to do with clearing debts. Instead, the plot is focused on how a beloved loyal wife will make the home beautiful. It also shows a wonderful mother-son relationship as well as themes of choosing duty over rash or impulsive emotions. As their love starts to bloom, you get to see how Saran and Rin's trust in each other abounds as well. Quick facts: 26 episodes | Romance, Comedy, Hidden Identity | Also known as New Cook | Watch on Dramacool Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Lomdao is returning from America when she discovers her grandmother has arranged a marriage for her with a reputable doctor, Param. Having no success convincing her grandmother to call off the engagement, Lomdao decides to disguise herself as a maid (Faidam) to work in Dr. Param's house and see if he would indeed be a good husband. Why I love it: The humor in this show is hysterical! I was laughing out loud in the middle of the night as I watched. The characters are easy to like - Lomdao is a strong and sassy female lead while Param isn't your typical oblivious male lead. The story is a little unbelievable at times Lomdoa forgets that they've met each other before, but this lakorn is heartwarming overall. Quick facts: 14 episodes | Historical, Romance, Comedy, Medical | Watch on Dramacool Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Chaba is a feisty and strong girl who wants to learn to sword fight rather than create floral wreaths and learn to cook. One day her mom gets sick and she needs to find a doctor to help. She looks for Thong, the herbal master who refuses to help at first, but then concedes and helps her mother recover. Chaba realizes that she wants to learn the science of medicine as well and pesters Thong Ek (thong's grandson) to teach her. Why I love it: This is yet again another historical drama. I enjoyed seeing how the Thai people worked with natural medicine in the past. I do enjoy the female lead in general and she does great in this film. Both leads create wonderful humor in this film as they start to fall in love. The film does have darker themes such as witchcraft and shamanism. Quick facts: 20 episodes | Romance, Drama, Business, Cohabitation | Also known as Jangwa Hua Jai Nai Saat | Watch on MyAsianTV Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Keetika is a well-established fashion designer who likes to play tricks and joke with Sira, a hardworking and focused businessman. Sira also has a couple of oddities: he hates lies and is a germaphobe. When Sira finds out that Keetika used to be the love interest of his troublemaker brother Sasa, Sira reluctantly asks for her help to get Sasa back on track. Why I love it: This contemporary romance is very well done: humor, plausible storyline, great timing for character and love development, and the leads were beautiful to watch! This Thai culture. The musical soundtrack is also very good and matches the drama well! Quick facts: 12 episodes | Action, Romance, Drama | Watch on Dramacool Watch the trailer on Youtube Plot: Princess Alice becomes endangered after her coronation ball by villains of her small country, Hrysos. She is moved to Thailand where Navy Seal Officer Davin becomes her bodyguard. Why I love it: I chose to watch this Thai lakorn because of the 2 main characters. They starred together in Duang Jai Akkhanee (featured in #3) and their chemistry is off the charts! I loved this movie more because of them than the plotline. This is an action-packed movie and less focused on romance, though there are plenty of heart-wrenching scenes, which makes it to the list of best all-time Thai dramas. Quick facts: 13 episodes Historical Fiction, Romance, Drama | Watch on Lakorn Galaxy, Watch Episodes 1-11 on Youtube, Epi falls for Laoperng, who is the leader of the village she finds herself in. Praenuan travels back and forth between the past and present through this enchanted bed. Why I love it: I do love an interesting time travel story. This makes the best all-time Thai dramas list because of the costumes and traditional life that Praenuan finds bringing the viewer a glimpse into traditional Thai life. If you can't tell, I do love dramas that have a historical or cultural aspect to them. There is a 2017 remake, however, I haven't seen it yet. I couldn't find a complete subtitled version - you can check out the original on Youtube. Watch the trailer on Youtube Princess Areeya escapes her country to Thailand for safekeeping as a traitor is trying to kill the royal family and overtake the throne. She poses as a wife to the Captain of the navy and they start to fall in love, but Areeya has a duty to return to her country. This Thai drama brings back nostalgia and researching it has made me want to watch it again. Watch the trailer on Youtube When Pojaman's father passes away, he directs her to go live in Ban Sai Thong (name of the house) with her aunt in Bangkok. As she does, she discovers that she is the actual owner of the house to its original owner This Thai drama is probably my introduction to Thai lakorns (I can't remember one before it!). There is A LOT of family drama, but the themes of kindness, forgiveness, and karma do shine through, along with romance from our 2 main characters. If you're into super soapy lakorns, there is a remake of Ban Sai Thong that is fully English subtitled. Update: this Thai lakorn is uploaded but not actually subtitled. Womp womp. Watch the trailer on Youtube When Nit's father passes away, she drops out of school and starts looking for a job. She gets a referral to work at a notable farm. To get away from her haughty sister-in-law, Nit accepts the job and finds herself in a whole new form of drama. The only downside is the hero's sister, who is a minor annoyance. However, I do enjoy the storyline. I love seeing beautiful farmland and the chemistry that grows between the 2 main characters. There is a remake of this film and it is fully subtitled so you can watch it version on Lakorn Galaxy. Pathapee Leh Ruk (2010): This is the story of Din and the 3rd installment of the 4 Hearts on the Mountain Series. It focuses on Din running the family hotel and falling in love with one of the employees. The chemistry between these 2 never picked up for me and it didn't leave the same satisfying feeling as the first 2 of the series with the quadruplets... and it did not go well. The script turned into the dark spiritual side of the Thai culture and it didn't translate well into the drama. Most of it is just witch-hunting and spiritual oppression. Unfortunately, Wayupak Montra just didn't translate well into the drama. And yes, there are cute, romantic scenes, but the plot just doesn't pull through. Thae is supposed to be our mean heroine, but in the middle of the show, she turns out to be kinda nice, and then it runs into your usual Thai lakorn. If they held her personality throughout the drama... maybe I may have liked it better? Since I grew up watching Thai dramas, I feel that I'm a self-made expert on the topic and providing recommendations. If you're new to the Thai world, do know that these are not similar to Korean dramas at all. There are a few trigger warnings (mentioned below), but I'm less affected by the triggers due to long-term exposure, but if anything is sensitive to you, like all things - read the labels and tread carefully. 1. When you start searching for Thai dramas, you'll notice that it's also referred to as Thai lakorn, which is the Thai translation for "soap opera." Thai translation for "soap opera." Thai lakorn, which is the Thai translation for "soap opera." Thai lakor You'll see themes of rape, abduction, kidnapping, forcible marriage, deceit, manipulation, greed, LGBT, and much more. I oftentimes feel hesitant introducing Thai lakorns to people who are sensitive to these topics because they're not hidden or glossed over in the films. So if anything on this list affects you, please do your research before diving into a lakorn. I can tell you that at least 1 of these themes is in every Thai lakorn. And after the rape scenes, manipulation, or deceit, you'll find the affected characters still in love. That's typical in a Thai drama. 3. On the other hand, you'll also see themes of extreme kindness, gentleness, goodness, and many more. Thai people believe in karma - what you do to someone, you'll receive in return, possibly tenfold. I believe that's one of the main character will have all the rage, deceit, manipulation, and greedy heart, while another (usually one of the main characters) will play the extreme opposite of goodness, kindness, forgiveness, and gentleness. 4. After all the trigger warnings I mentioned, Thai people are also conservative, strange I know - it's just the way the culture is. You'll see awkward kissing scenes and bashful looks in budding romances. 5. Cultural tip: Thai people use specific words to address another person. For example, a person formally addressing another person would say "Khun," but if they are friends or acquaintances, they would drop that term. You'll also often notice that females will say "kha" and men will say "kh their own personality! This is in no way an exhaustive list, but these are my go-to's when I'm itching for a Thai drama. I hope you found something here that sparks your interest and makes you want to jump on the lakorn train. Ready to jump into Thai lakorn marathons?
