

I'm not a bot

We took a look at the Real v Valencia game on ITV4 last night and were quite surprised by how bad the Bernabeu pitch was. It looked like it had been cut up and was really uneven, similar to the Gtech when you see close-up replays of the action. (Valencia seem very poor defensively and sinking fast, too) ...it'll be interesting to see if this new stadium setup actually generates significant revenue and justifies the massive investment in rebuilding. As it stands, they've compromised the pitch and the terrain, which doesn't seem like an incidental weather issue - we watched the Atleti v Barca game earlier and it was played on a perfect surface. Chelsea's pitch also looks pretty rough. From our seats, it seemed like the groundstaff were working hard to get the pitch back in shape. The state of the pitch might be an overreaction from some fans, though! Chelsea's pitch looked just as bad on Friday night; what's their excuse...too many expensive players wearing it out?! Let's compare the other 18 pitches and see how ours stacks up. Up the Irish! I think the 'state of the pitch' is a bit too harsh, led by some anti-football fans. Chelsea's pitch looked no better on Friday night; what's their excuse...too many expensive excess players wearing it out?! Let's have an analysis of the 18 other pitches to compare with ours. Up the Irish! I assume you're writing this? The pigeons in front of the West Stand were having a great time eating grass seed during the first half on Saturday...their easy progress showed how little Southampton threatened us that day. Mafeking Avenue gets you here, right? The pigeons in front of the West Stand were having a great time eating grass seed during the first half on Saturday...their serene progress also showed how little Southampton threatened us that day. It seems some teams have preferred formations with fewer players up front. The few who do it well are the envy of many fans who only watch. Tractors outside the ground this morning suggested they were about to rip up the surface and start a new renovation. Something needs to be done! Our pitch looks like my allotment from last year, and the club hasn't said anything official about LI not using our pitch anymore. Once the weather allowed it, the ground staff did a great job, by the way. We went to the B team game v Blackburn and were surprised how good the pitch was - lovely! Mafeking Avenue gets you there, indeed. The Chelsea players seemed to love the surface too, keeping the shaving foam away from the referee to preserve its beauty. "Learn to sit back and observe. Not everything needs a reaction." It looks like they really enjoyed it! harry redknapp is just head of a rotten fish, thankfully! Some fans were happy when LI started leaving grass long in corners. Proper John Beck-style. The 'old' days would only have had grass in the corners and mud everywhere by this time of the season. We remember that 3-1 win over Man City in the cup - it was a muddy pitch but some great goals! A mix of synthetic fibres and naturally grown grass is what we have, similar to Wembley and Twickenham's Desso Grassmaster pitch. It's used at professional stadiums and seems perfect for our needs. We're just not sure how much it costs for other teams to use them...do they roll it up and stick it in the back of a van? The start of this season has been better than last; is there something specific that's changed? A Desso pitch is what we have, looking beautiful today. It looked superb in the sunshine today. Even the Chelsea players thought so, keeping the shaving foam away to preserve its beauty. "Learn to sit back and observe. Not everything needs a reaction." Indeed. The Chelsea players obviously loved the surface too, keeping it clean frequently. harry redknapp is just head of a rotten fish...anyway, thanks for LI going! Saw a snippet on TV yesterday about leaving grass long in corners - what a difference from the old days. By this time in the season, there would only be grass in the corners and mud everywhere. Anyone remember that 3-1 victory over Man City in the cup? A classic FA Cup Round Three match...The pitch was in a mess. It was all they could do to kick the ball! what great days!!! Perfection. A bobble is more likely on the tables at The Crucible. Page 2 Pitch being sanded? Remembering; 24 Players & 7 Guests who appeared for Brentford & gave their lives during WWI & WWII Looking good!! Mafeking Avenue.....gets you there! Guess taken in May....all looks very green + correct order with the posts heh! Think we all can agree looks good in a great setting. Pitch was immaculate last night. The Spanish no.4 would give Chis Norgaard a run for his money. Sublime player. Sat in E14 last night. Great view and a great spot for the BYE to engage with the opposition. so proud of our magnificent ground. Great atmosphere last night. Coventry City match postponed tomorrow due to unsafe pitch. It is an extreme situation as the Commonwealth Games Rugby 7's was played there over a few days. We're managing the pitch well for the two clubs at Gtech but goes to show how it can easily go wrong. The problem at coventry is that the rugby team are the owners of the stadium. That is the problem, and reports are behind on significant bond repayments, hopefully for the football team this isn't a sign of things to come this season. I would love Coventry to get to the prem and have the resource to kick the twt's out. I know where the bodies are buried. Looked excellent today, despite LI playing last week. Looked like groundstaff did a great job covering up rugby markings too. Seem to have a much closer match of the paint, to the grass this season!! Mafeking Avenue.....gets you there! Looked excellent today, despite LI playing last week. Looked like groundstaff did a great job covering up rugby markings too. Seem to have a much closer match of the paint, to the grass this season!! Helped by the fact the covered rugby line is on the edge of a roller line. Hardly noticeable. Pitch looked excellent. Did look good yesterday, with no sign of the rugby markings. What? The rugby lines were clearly visible. Certainly nowhere near as 'clear' as last season. When it appeared they were trying to disguise them using lime green paint..... Barely noticeable from West Stand yesterday..... Nor from the North Stand halfway line. Pitch looked patchy and cut up badly in front of N126 Certainly nowhere near as 'clear' as last season. When it appeared they were trying to disguise them using lime green paint..... Barely noticeable from West Stand yesterday..... Now you mention it, I didn't notice them either. In a world without leaders, who'd start all the wars? Quite noticeable from N121 and a few areas clearly having seen a lot of scrummaging, or similar rugby problem at coventry is that the rugby team are the owners of the stadium. That is the problem, and reports are behind on significant bond repayments, hopefully for the football team this isn't a sign of things to come this season. A pitch needs to be managed especially when you have football and rugby every other week. That is the problem, and reports are behind on significant bond repayments; hopefully for the football team this isn't a sign of things to come this season. I would love Coventry to get to the prem and have the resource to kick the twt's out. I know where the bodies are buried. Looked excellent today, despite LI playing last week. Looked like groundstaff did a great job covering up rugby markings too. Seem to have a much closer match of the paint, to the grass this season!! Mafeking Avenue.....gets you there! Looked excellent today, despite LI playing last week. Looked like groundstaff did a great job covering up rugby markings too. Seem to have a much closer match of the paint, to the grass this season!! Helped by the fact the covered rugby line is on the edge of a roller line. Hardly noticeable. Pitch looked excellent. Did look good yesterday, with no sign of the rugby markings. What? The rugby lines were clearly visible. Certainly nowhere near as 'clear' as last season. When it appeared they were trying to disguise them using lime green paint..... Barely noticeable from West Stand yesterday..... Nor from the North Stand halfway line. Pitch looked patchy and cut up badly in front of N126 Certainly nowhere near as 'clear' as last season. When it appeared they were trying to disguise them using lime green paint..... Barely noticeable from West Stand yesterday..... Now you mention it, I didn't notice them either. In a world without leaders, who'd start all the wars? Quite noticeable from N121 and a few areas clearly having seen a lot of scrummaging, or similar rugby problem at coventry is that the rugby team are the owners of the stadium. That is the problem, and reports are behind on significant bond repayments, hopefully for the football team this isn't a sign of things to come this season. A pitch needs to be managed especially when you have football and rugby every other week. That is the problem, and reports are behind on significant bond repayments; hopefully for the football team this isn't a sign of things to come this season. I would love Coventry to get to the prem and have the resource to kick the twt's out. I know where the bodies are buried. Looked excellent today, despite LI playing last week. Looked like groundstaff did a great job covering up rugby markings too. Seem to have a much closer match of the paint, to the grass this season!! Mafeking Avenue.....gets you there! Not so sure, Rayas kicking wasnt what we are used to and I think the pitch was a major factor. Really! The pitch might well deteriorate over next few weeks, but honestly didn't notice he struggled at all today. Mafeking Avenue.....gets you there! It did look poor by modern standards. Sadly, it is in really poor nick and, with six games in the next three weeks, its going to be worse by mid-January. Didn't look bad on the TV, other than the grass was too long. Funny how things change. IMO nothing wrong with it. Going back players would have loved to play on a surface like that. Didn't stop Spurs turning the screw. People looking for something that might (probably will??) happen..... IMHO..... Mafeking Avenue.....gets you there! Well, from Row 10 of the South Stand it looks really poor (by 2022 PL standards) Have a look at the heavy roller on youtube to see howthis new kit is a bit of an oddball, to say the least. The design seems like it's trying to be too trendy and edgy, but ultimately ends up looking messy. I'm not a big fan of the black stripe on the sleeve - it just doesn't sit right with me. And don't even get me started on the stupid sponsors logo that makes us look cheap as chips. Give me a break! At least the top is okay, but overall, I'm pretty disappointed. The video release was cool, though - loved the references to Griffin Park and our history. On a more practical note, I think it's a bit weird that only kids can wear this kit because of Nathan Young-Coombes. Why should they get to have all the fun? And what's up with the infant versions being signed off as okay when the adult version is just rubbish? I do like the idea of season ticket holders getting a discount code, though. That's a nice touch. But seriously, can someone please explain why the price went up by at least 2 and then they still managed to give us a "discount" that's only 5 off?Anyway, I think Brentford is an amazing team (even if some of our sponsors are a bit dodgy), but this new kit just doesn't do them justice. Can't wait for the new season, though!!I'm expecting my daughter to grow out of her junior XL by next season, probably moving to an adult small now. It's not just the additional cost that bothers me but also the idea of a 12-year-old advertising a betting company. The current kit isn't bad, although I think it would look better with three red stripes and a black collar. Its not just the extra cost but do I want her advertising a betting company? Some adult smalls will be sold as Junior kits with PensionBee on.My prediction is we'll kick off against Spurs wearing our blue kit and the club trying to claim it's all part of an elaborate launch plan for the missing home kit. Why would Spurs wear our blue kit if we don't even use it ourselves? I think we're worried about its durability, but also not keen on hiding a bad product.if the marketing aim is to sell fewer replica shirts they've nailed it When does the deal with Hollywood Bets finish; is it at the end of next season?The article says "Hollywoodbets continues as our front-of-shirt sponsor for the 2023/24 and 24/25 seasons." So, at least until 2025. Personally, I love this kit. It's the best since our first year in The Championship IMO. I like the black fade at the bottom. Are you suggesting we take a 15m hit? That would inevitably reduce the player budget...over land and sea and Leipzig and Dulmen[Response back from the club regarding sponsor-less and long sleeve shirts was not forthcoming. "Thank you for your email, all released kit is available to reorder on our website, any kit that is not there has not been realised yet. Any more stock is unconfirmed unfortunately." I find it odd they don't know if we have any sponsor-less or long sleeve shirts on order! due in We will release a long sleeve shirt in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match? Amazed anyone got hold of one, let alone got the squad to sign it. This new kit isn't red and white; it's mostly is. Look forward to seeing everything Wasn't there about three options paraded on the day, and the shirt with the best reaction was used? The poor kid who wore the red and black stripes never recovered from abuse! Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. I wonder if they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must beugrude them it. Brentford are brilliant. Not all posts about football, Brentford FC, or Thomas The Tank Engine are 100% serious. They only had two seasons to sort this out. Maybe they can't decide on sponsor so everything gets held up till August Old habits.... Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. Yeah, prefer a centre red stripe although we got promoted with a white one. My general recollection of all our promotions starting from 1978 is that the shirts were ones I didn't like as much as the previous season. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? The Daily Mirror carried a simple banner; 'Goodbye, Brentford.' 19/1/1967 Ah, now I prefer wider stripes, but the downside is that the centre stripe might be white. The SAS logo will look great on it. All races, all races, that's the way we like it. You preferred thin striped, 'pink' centenary shirt to the 1990-2 best ever home shirt? I'm getting odd, so what I remember may be wrong. No, definitely didn't prefer the "pink" one. In a world without leaders, who'd start wars? Can we have this one, please? The simpler, the better imb. Just to add to conspiracy; Jensen, Schade & Mee were photographed in the Griffin. Maybe they were attending the stadium for promo shots in the new kit? If that's true, we must be purchasing Schade after his loan ended. If I remember correctly for those who don't know this was the kit unveiled at GP with a chorus of boos when the juniors paraded it in the early 00s. It was immediately scrapped and never worn in a match