Gopeed is a free and open-source download manager that supports HTTP, BitTorrent, and Magnet protocols. It's developed using Golang and Flutter, making it lightweight and simple to use. The software can run on Windows, macOS, Linux, Android, and iOS platforms, with a web interface for management. Gopeed also supports Docker for containerization.A notable update is the version 1.3.5, which improves BT task creation speed, adds Japanese support, and fixes client-side logging issues. Other updates include improved web building modes and fixed resource file name parsing in HTTP resources.To use Gopeed, download the suitable version for your system platform. For macOS users who encounter opening errors, execute the command "xattr -d com.apple.quarantine /Applications/Gopeed.app" in the terminal. The Docker method involves running "docker run -d -p 9999:9999 -v /path/to/download/download liwei2633/gopeed".Gopeed offers a simple interface for setting up and managing downloads. It's a versatile tool for managing files across various platforms, with an emphasis on ease of use.The effectiveness of Gopeed can be tested by its users; some even provide detailed instructions for fixing common issues, such as the impact of kernel.dll updates in certain versions of Baidu Cloud Disk (Baiduyunpan) on Cheat Engine (CE), which might result in loss of speed modification capabilities. Users like 'quitplace' suggest installing older versions of Baiduyunpan and renaming or deleting specific files to resolve these issues.Gopeed is available for download from its official website, with different versions suitable for various platforms.
